The dividends not distributed to preference share shareholders will not be accrued to the next interest-bearing year.

Article 321 In the event of liquidation due to dissolution, bankruptcy or any other reasons, all preference share shareholders shall be pari passu and have priority of compensation over the ordinary shareholders but shall be inferior to all debtors (including owners of any tier 2 capital instrument) of the Bank in respect of the remaining assets of the Bank. The liquidation compensation of the preference share shareholders shall be the amount equal to the total value of the issued outstanding preference shares plus declared but unpaid dividends for the current period.
